Not illustrated. 1917 Excerpt: .to him (which he may cash at once, as a separate transaction) and a credit slip is issued in favor of the cashier s account. This credit slip is then passed to the general bookkeeper. 2. At the close of the day, debit slips are made out for the footings of the Face of Note and Interest columns, and a credit slip is made out for the Discount column. These three slips are passed to the general bookkeeper. The sum of the credit slips issued for the separate proceeds items and the credit slip issued for the discount total equals the sum of the two debit slips issued. In some banks the loans and the discounts made are recorded in separate books, one known as a loan register and the other as a discount register. In the Crete National Bank, however, we combine the two records....
